Do All Kids Deserve Good Schools?

You are shaking your head “Yes” and wondering why such a question appears in the PEF Report. Of course all kids deserve good schools! Doesn't everyone think so?

Unfortunately, too many people don't. We are currently engaged in a fight to keep the school funding for Paterson children and other poor children around the state of New Jersey adequate to give them a quality education. We have to win the battle.

Our children are telling us, “We want to succeed. We need your help!”

We hear it over and over. This fall at PEF's third “Graduating Every Paterson Child” conference, our kids told us, “We need you to help us.”

We heard from the newly formed Paterson Youth Council. We heard it from the Paterson Teach For Tomorrow students. “I want my students to get a better education than I did.”

And most poignantly from the youngest of them following a service learning trip to Grenada, “I didn't know that there is so much opportunity out here for me.”

These students want to be the first in their families to graduate and go on to college. We cannot fail them.

Following the “College Track”

“Give them hope,” said keynote speaker Dr. Pedro Noguera as he addressed PEF’s Graduating Every Paterson Child conference in September.

Anna looks forward to the next stage of College Track as PEF trains young people to provide peer to peer workshops using the College Track.

PEF College Track workshops also include the guide “You Can Get There from Here” produced by the students of JFK’s Communications Academy. The second edition is being distributed throughout Paterson. It features some very fascinating stories. David Ward writes about his mother who will be a freshman in college at the same time as David. Tasmiah Choudhury profiles a JFK graduate, Nellista Bess, who has returned to JFK to teach.

“Give us inspiration,” asked Brenda Valladares, a senior at International High School and a member of the newly formed Paterson Youth Council.

Also profiled are some of the JFK students who wrote the first edition of the guide. They are now in college and reflect on their experiences. Some of the students are thriving. Others are struggling. All of them agree with Marliedy Morel, now a Montclair State University student, “I didn’t realize the caliber of work expected until I went to college.”

“Don’t give up on us. Sometimes kids don’t show that they want help, but they do,” confided Kathy Chavez of JF Kennedy HS.

Danielle Basu learned the hard way. Starting as an EOF student at Ramapo College, she has returned to PCCC to recover her academic way. “In JFK, I was able to have my fun all the time and do my homework a minute before class. There is no way I can do that here... College isn’t like any high school. Responsibility plays a major part.”

Anna Villalongo of PEF listens and shakes her head. “Too many young people don’t know what they need to do,” she says. “That’s why our College Track workshops are so important. Whether we are talking to young people or their parents, they need hope-and information.”

JFK’s Communications Academy students are currently working on a third edition of the guide with PEF support. “Working on the guide has been a tremendous opportunity for my students to focus on preparing for college,” says Lories Nye-Slockbower, faculty advisor.

Anna trains and coordinates PEF’s 16 volunteer College Track facilitators. In 2006, Anna and the College Track volunteers will have introduced more than 1,200 young people and their parents to the requirements of getting on the college track.

Karen Mayo-Hogan, PEF board member and College Track facilitator, is passionate about expanding the opportunity for young people. “So many of us didn’t get to go. Nobody thought that we were college material. I want to change that. I know that by working together we can.”

Making change in Paterson is NOT a spectator sport! We need everyone's help to move forward.

Here are 10 things you can do to make change.

1. Take action, don't just grumble. Legislators, school board members and newspapers can't hear you unless you write, email or phone. So few people do that your voice will be really loud.
2. Tell people what you value. Good schools, fairness, equity, and accountability are values we embrace as Americans. Speaking of your values gains you allies.
3. Support the children around you. If we all do that, then we CAN reach them all.
4. Participate in a group at your school, house of worship, local neighborhood. No single person can make the changes our children need. Work together.
5. Vote. And encourage others to vote.
6. Learn about the issues.
7. Attend a School Board Meeting.
8. Schedule a College Track Workshop. Call Anna Villalongo at (973) 881-8914.
9. Sign the Give Schools Good Schools Pledge at www.givekidsgoodschools.org.
10. Tell your friends and family 10 things they can do to make change.
